Is there anything about you that your future partner would want to know before becoming involved with you? Yes No — When

I was younger, I tried and worked at many, many things which I liked about my job and hobbies.

These experiences cover generations, and I learned a lot, and consider it my good fortune.

Until now, I may not have considered loving someone and marriage as priorities. Even so, my life has been fulfilling and I'm content with it.

But now, if I can share emotion, joy, and even sadness with someone, and if I can think of life from different aspects, there could be a different world... I think. For example, I enjoy cooking and if my loved one says it's tasty, I'll be happier! Taking care of your health, trying hard to learn your language -- those are normal things. I'd like to try hard to become a good wife for you, from my heart.

What are your hopes and plans for the future? I'd like to share happy times as much as we can while spending daily life peacefully.

What message would you like to send to your future spouse? I'm looking forward meeting you! Let's create a comfortable home together and get along well in a cozy atmosphere. I'll study your language hard and I'd like to talk about and understand everything as much as I can. I hope to get to know your parents, brothers and friends, and create a good relationship.
